Program In A Box: AAUW has created new online resource called "Program in a Box" to help members consider and choose program activities for their branches. Each Program in a Box outlines an activity that could be chosen for your branch, with the "what, why, and how" to implement that program. Each Program in a Box has hyperlinks to downloadable resources that provide wider programming options.

Also: The Center for Women & Information Technology's "You Can Be Anything" is a 3:50 min. video which uses the power of media to give young people, particularly girls and young women, a very positive impression of the career opportunities available in information technology (IT) and science-related fields where technology plays a major role. This short, fast-paced, high-quality video uses the techniques of music videos to portray a wide variety of women, both past and present, using technology in a variety of fields. The music and images are combined in exciting ways that appeal to young people, engage their emotions, capture their attention, and convey the message that technology is cool and offers many exciting fields for women as well as men.
