Mitzi Witchger Promotes AAUW in IN

To say the least, Mitzi Witchger is one busy woman! She currently serves as public policy chair at the state level and has a long list of accomplishments in that venue. Through her diligent work, AAUW’s visibility in Indianapolis and Indiana has grown. So it came as no surprise when the state board chose to honor her as their named grant recipient for the $500 sent to the Educational Foundation in late 2002.

Her recent work as our public policy representative takes up an entire 8-1/2 x 11 sheet of paper! Included in that list are:

- Received Public Policy Impact Grant from Association and, as a result, many hours of work and travel throughout the state to educate voters
- Received a Get Out the Vote campaign grant for the 2nd District of Indiana and worked there with the South Bend branch to distribute 14,000 voter guides
- Spoke at the USDOE Title IX Commission hearing in September 2002
- Served as a member of the planning committee of Indiana Commission for Women for the 2002 Legislative Day and facilitated a lobbying workshop
  - Bought 300 Indianapolis Star “A Citizen’s Guide to the IN General Assembly,” donated 100 to the Indiana Commission for Women, and distributed 200 to AAUW members throughout the state
  - Developed a statewide email network of AAUW contacts and regularly updates them on legislative issues
- Writes letters to the editor and encourages others to do the same in support of AAUW positions on issues of education, equity and life-long learning for women and girls
- Stays in contact with Association and other

Phrases from Phyllis Thompson

AAUW Members – Take Another Look!!

What is our mission? Why do we do what we do? What is our organization's reason for being? How do we want our communities to perceive us?

Our mission cannot be impersonal; it must have meaning, it must be something in which we believe and act upon. It must be something we know is right.

AAUW's mission is to promote equity for all women and girls, lifelong education, and positive societal change.

AAUW values and seeks a diverse membership. There shall be no barriers to full participation in this organization on the basis of gender, race, creed, age, sexual orientation, national origin, disability, or class.

So how do we get new members, satisfy our current members and gain greater visibility within our communities? We need to ask ourselves these questions and over and over again because people constantly change. So sometimes we need to change how we do something to attract new members, retain our current members and to work with those in our communities. Sometimes changing little things can produce results, but we must do this with regard for our basic integrity.

I look at Indiana branches today and I see women and men who are willing to work in collaboration with organizations within their communities. This is gaining visibility as to who we are. I also see women and men actively talking about AAUW, its mission and what it can do for each of us. I see a commitment and a reawakening as to our strength and power.

I think about the South Bend branch and what a superb job it has done in participating in AAUW’s Get Out the Vote. The task was not easy, but a commitment was made and as a result 14,000 letters were sent on issues pertaining to women and why it is important for all citizens to vote. Thank you, thank you, South Bend members. Thank you too to Indiana board member Laura LeRoy for working with Joanna Hock, South Bend president, and Betty Lawson, South Bend public policy chair.

I would like to challenge each branch, where there is a university or college to work more closely with that college or university. What a wonderful way to collaborate and cooperate. Resources and results will abound.

I also want to challenge each branch in Indiana to participate in the 21st Century Recognition Program. It is simple and every branch is doing something for which it should be recognized.

I would encourage each member to remember AAUW’s mission and then to act. I want to encourage each member to participate in branch activities, in state activities, such as convention in Richmond on May 17, 2003. Also, plan to attend Association Convention in Providence, Rhode Island in June of 2003.

Finally, I want each Indiana AAUW member to remember that in 2004 Indiana is hosting the Regional Conference in Indianapolis. This means all of us will be challenged and working together. We are truly going to show our “Hoosier Hospitality.”

As each day dawns, I realize how strong and unique AAUW members are. We need to remember we are “Women in Charge.”

Jenckes Awards Honor Women

The 2002 Virginia Jenckes awardees and guests gathered in the Statehouse Rotunda to celebrate the contributions of five women and one man in various fields. Honorees were Patricia Miller and Barbara Baekgaard, founders of Vera Bradley Designs for their contributions in the field of business; Dr. Rebecca Pierce, education; Geneva Shedd, government; Sheila Suess Kennedy, law; and Elmer Blankenship, for significant contributions by a male to gender equality.

The award is named after Virginia Ellis Jenckes, the first woman to be elected by Indiana voters to serve in the U.S. House of Representatives. She served three consecutive terms there from 1933-39. In 1937 she was the U.S. delegate to the Interparliamentary Union in Paris, France. After leaving Congress, Jenckes remained in Washington D.C. for many years working for the American Red Cross.

Sheila Klinker Appointed VC of House Ways and Means

House Speaker B. Patrick Bauer appointed Representative Sheila Klinker to serve as vice chairman of the most powerful legislative committee. She will be the first woman chosen for this two-year appointment according to Bauer.

Rep. Klinker (D-Lafayette) has been a member of this committee since 1989 and will be a major player in the formation of the state’s biennial budget. With the state facing a $780 million budget deficit and low revenue collections, the legislative session is expected to be a difficult one.

She served as chairman of the Higher Education Subcommittee of the Ways and Means Committee last budget session and has also been assistant majority caucus chair. Bauer credited Klinker with having a thorough understanding of the budget process and trusts her judgment. William Crawford (D-Indianapolis) chairs the committee.

See our website http://web.indstate.edu/aauw-in for a list of committee appointments for the coming legislative session.

Save the Date – Indiana State Convention—May 17, 2003

Jean Ammon, vice president - program

This year’s state convention, entitled “Indiana Women In Charge,” will be hosted by the Richmond branch. Held at the Friends Fellowship hall in Richmond, it will feature Claire King as our keynote speaker. Ms. King is an instructor of English at Martin University in Indianapolis and a Research Fellow of the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Alabama. She will speak to us on diversity issues and lead an intriguing interactive exercise. You will also receive some free materials on teaching and encouraging tolerance, which will be valuable gifts for your branch as well as for educators at all levels whom you know.

Further, you will hear panelists on some of AAUW’s other focus areas: bullying, harassment, and hate crimes. You will meet EF recipients, and in addition to all this, you will be offered two workshops, one a “How-To” session – how to make branch operations more efficient and focused, how to become more team-oriented, how to enjoy branch life more fully! – and back by popular demand, a workshop on personal finance geared toward the needs of women. Guests are welcome!

The fee for this one-day packed event is just $35, which includes breakfast and a luncheon. (A late fee of $5 will be added after May 8th.) Registration and breakfast will begin at 8:00 a.m.,

Membership Tools
Pat Robinson, vice president – membership

Branch vice presidents of membership should have a copy of the 2001 edition AAUW Leadership Library Membership Toolkit. If your predecessor did not pass a copy to you, please contact Helpline (800-326-AAUW). On pages 4-7 you will find a Membership Development Calendar. This will help you plan, schedule, and remember important deadlines.

Branches can obtain free membership brochures through Shop AAUW (www.aauw.org, click Shop AAUW or call 800-225-9998 ext. 546). You need only pay shipping costs. The new Shop AAUW catalog is available online and a print copy was disseminated with the Fall Outlook in November.

Categories of Membership and Association Dues
- Members (MOB) branch members - $39
- Dual members – affiliated with more than one branch - $39
- Members-at-Large (MAL) – receive AAUW Outlook and all Association services except those made available only through the branch and state - $40
- Paid Life Members (MBL) – branch members can become paid life branch members by paying the current amount for branch Association dues multiplied by 20. Members-at-Large can become paid life members-at-large by paying the current amount for MAL Association dues multiplied by 20.

Membership Programs Available
- Give a Grad a Gift – this program provides free memberships and is now available all year long online at www.aauw.org. Please take advantage of this great opportunity to give a recent graduate a one-year AAUW membership – and don’t forget to encourage them to renew.
- Shape the Future (STF) Membership Campaign – I refer to the program as 2 for 1 (that is, $39 for 2). Here’s a few tips on what your branch can do –
  - Add the membership twist – recruit women who attend the AAUW-sponsored programs such as Sister-to-Sister, Transitions, and the Voter Education campaign events.
  - Shape the Future Campaign – earn free memberships. Branches can apply each free Association membership to pay the dues of one new, lapsed, or renewing member. A branch can earn up to three free Association memberships.

Recruiting
- Members-at-Large – get a mailing list for your area by contacting John A. Greene, membership program assistant at greenej@aauw.org or 202-785-7779.
- New members
  - Shape the Future Membership Campaign – contact John Greene (see above)
  - For those joining after March 15 – if they paid $39 Association dues, they are considered having paid for both the current year and next year
- Retaining members – consider these:
  - Every member is valuable
  - Attitude of members

Proposed Dues Increase

While AAUW is cutting costs, balancing its budget, and seeking new revenue streams, members now are considering an additional solution: small dues increments on a regular basis.

Delegates at the 2003 convention (June 19-21, 2003 in Providence, RI) will consider an annual dues increase of a specific amount. If adopted, the bylaws change would institute a minimal $2 yearly increase for branch members, which could be easily anticipated.

Proposal

Delegates will consider a “fixed-value” dues increase every year; a change that is made through a bylaws amendment. Then delegates will consider the amount of the increase. The proposal is for $2. If approved, the increase would take effect for the 2004-05 AAUW year.

If the annual increase is not adopted, delegates will consider a proposal to increase dues by $4 effective 2004-05.

Why it is Needed

Like every organization, business, and individual, AAUW faces continually rising costs due to inflation. We have also had significant declines in membership in recent years, which has meant lower revenues. The Association board of directors continues to pursue a course of fiscal responsibility. We have approved a balanced budget for 2002-03. Our staff has instituted business practices designed to allow us to use our resources more effectively.

But even with the new budgetary and business practices in place, the combination of rising costs and lower revenues has meant that we have been unable to develop new programs and services. And that limits our ability to advance our mission: education and equity for women and girls.

The last dues increase ($10) was approved at the 1999 convention. At that time, members indicated their preference for more frequent, smaller dues increases. By moving to an annual dues increase, the board and members can better plan financially and will no longer have to spend convention sessions debating dues increases.

Effect on Membership

We may lose some members, but the added revenue will allow us to increase our efforts on behalf of all women and girls, which in the long term will attract more individuals committed to our mission.

If you have any questions, refer to AAUW in Action and AAUW Outlook or call the Helpline at 800-326-AAUW or email HELPLINE@aauw.org.
Newsletter Contest

Remember our newsletter contest this year! A branch must publish at least three issues during the year in order to be eligible and copies of each issue must be submitted. Entries will be judged by an independent panel of three on content and design. Branches will be divided into groups according to size.

The contest began in August 2002 and ends in March 2003 with the winners honored at the 2003 State Convention on May 17. Winning entries will be displayed so everyone can benefit.

Please send three copies of each of three issues to Barbara Wellnitz, the newsletter editor (see below for the address) by April 1, 2003. If you have any questions, please contact the editor either by phone or via email (see below).

AAUW National Committee on Resolutions Votes No

The AAUW National Committee on Resolutions rejected the proposed Department of Peace resolution passed by delegates at the 2002 Indiana State Convention. This means it will not be on the agenda for the 2003 Association Convention.

The proposed resolution was rejected because "There was small probability for implementation of such a proposal given the current global and congressional climate...and the limited resources in time and personnel of the AAUW Public Policy staff and volunteers to move this proposal through Congress."

(Ed note: information excerpted from the Calumet Area branch newsletter.)

Resource Guide

The task force's resource guide, Harassment-Free Hallways: How to Stop Sexual Harassment in School, a guide for students, parents, and educators, was posted on AAUW's website (download at www.aauw.org/7000/ef/hasl) August 20, 2002 to coincide with back-to-school activities. It features

- Targeted checklists and surveys to assess existing sexual harassment policies
- Proven practical strategies to help prevent sexual harassment in schools
- An extensive list of resources
- Examples of model sexual harassment policies and prevention programs nationwide
- Separate downloadable sections specifically geared to various audiences
- A survey, resource list, and safety plan just for students.

Free bookmarks are now available to distribute to students, school staff, and parents. Contact 202-728-3300 or email gibbs@aauw.org.

Sexual Harassment

Hostile Hallways: Bullying, Teasing, and Sexual Harassment in School (AAUW Educational Foundation, 2001) exposed an alarming paradox. Students today are more aware of school policies concerning sexual harassment than they were in 1993 when the Foundation took the first survey but sexual harassment remains a serious problem in our schools.

- Seven in 10 students (69%) in 2001 said their schools have a policy on sexual harassment, compared to less than three in 10 (26%) in 1993.
- In 2002, as in 1993, four out of five students, both boys and girls, said they had experienced sexual harassment at school.

Clearly, awareness of policies has not resulted in lower rates of harassment.

Foundation takes action

In response, the Foundation convened a task force of national educational leaders, researchers, and school climate experts to develop a user-friendly resource guide to help schools, school districts, parents, and students assess the effectiveness of sexual harassment policies and create a safe school environment. The sexual harassment task force was convened in November 2001 in partnership with the National Education Association and with initial support from 3M, First USA, the National Education Association, and the AAUW Educational Foundation.

The National Women's Music Festival (NWMF) will host its 2003 get together on June 5-8 at Ball State University in Muncie celebrating the Year of the B.A.D. Girls.

Why "B.A.D." girls? We intend to give new definitions to the meaning of this patriarchal term and claim it as our own powerful rallying cry! Each month between now and next year's festival, we'll announce a new definition so that by the time you arrive at NWMF next year, you'll be well versed in how to be B.A.D.

October's definition of B.A.D. is Bold and Defiant:

B.A.D. girls break the rules - and then make new rules!

B.A.D. girls are out to change the world!

B.A.D. girls pave the way for their daughters!

November's definition: Brave And Dedicated

B.A.D. girls bravely stand in unity with their sisters and are dedicated to peace on earth.

B.A.D. girls are bravely dedicated to making the world a better place.

B.A.D. girls are bravely dedicated to saving the environment.

B.A.D. girls are bravely dedicated to protecting our children.

B.A.D. girls bravely challenge lawmakers and are dedicated to ensuring that all people have equal rights regardless of their race, religion, age, gender, or sexual orientation.

Mark your calendar, submit your vacation request, tell all your friends, and spread the word any way you can: Join us and be as B.A.D. as you can be in 2003!

Agnes George, Board Secretary

AAUW's advocacy on issues regarding gender equity and voter education drew Agnes in as a member. And once the Gary-Merrillville branch got her, they have kept her busy as their first official newsletter editor and serving on the Educational Foundation committee. That's what it takes to keep women interested and motivated to stay — involvement!

Agnes is a graduate of Mississippi Valley State University and is a Mississippi native. However, since coming to Gary over 30 years ago, she has adopted the community and been active in several groups and activities there.

She's a library media specialist at Wirt High School where she also serves as the Media Services Department chair, is a member of the School Improvement team, and the North Center Association/Performance-Based Accreditation/Title I Self-Study Initiative. She adds her expertise to her building's scholarship committee.

Her distribution of donated books has led to books being shipped to needy children and schools in Africa and the Philippines. She serves on the steering committee of a citywide reading program, Battle of the Books, and sponsors her school's Battle of the Books team and the Top Reader Award program. She has also served on a statewide committee for the selection of Read Aloud books.

Agnes is married with three children and three grandchildren.

We welcome her to the state board to complete an unexpired term this year.

Reach for the Stars

Delinda Chapman, Great Lakes Regional Director

As Great Lakes Regional Director, I have a perspective I did not have as a branch member or officer, or even as a state board member. It has permitted me to see more and more women in interesting advanced positions having opportunities to speak, produce, instruct, organize and lead. The newsletters from branches and states from the region and around the country picture these women, laud their achievements, advertise their worth, and announce their specialties.

Title IX, ERA and yes, AAUW can take credit for promoting women, legislation, equity, education, and women's rights. Over 50% of the population in our colleges and universities today are women. The percentage of women in the workforce is growing. Women know their worth. It's not "will I," it's "what will I..." Young women may be taking these opportunities for granted. Why shouldn't they? They haven't seen the struggle. Wasn't this exactly what we have been struggling for? We are seeing the fruits of our labors and we can rejoice. Women are realizing equity.

AAUW has been very active in Secretary of Education's Commission on Opportunity in Athletics Title IX hearings being held around the country. As this Commission tinkers with Title IX, questioning its efficacy and legitimacy, we must keep active and vigilant. We know how important it is to keep Title IX intact. Women have gained too much through the enactment of this legislation to see it eroded now.

Mitzi Witchger, AAUW Indiana state board, and I were speakers at the Title IX hearing held in Chicago. (See picture on page 6) Our AAUW voices and messages of equity were heard. Here is an excerpt of my 5-minute statement.

I know you have heard from a wide range of people on the progress that has been made over the past 30 years as a result of Title IX. However I have also heard members of this commission, panelists, and previous speakers say that while they support Title IX, they still think changes need to be made, particularly with the three-prong test. In fact, some people will even say that while they support Title IX, it is depriving men of opportunities to play sports. I am here to tell you that this argument misses the whole point of Title IX. In fact, before Title IX was enacted 30 years ago, women and girls were routinely denied opportunities in education and athletics.

And while I will not enumerate the lack of access women and girls had before Title IX was enacted, I will point out that it is not the case that Title IX is responsible for the budgetary decisions individual institutions around the country are making to cut sports teams—and potentially access for men and women. In fact, in this time of economic uncertainty, it is critical that Title IX's regulations and statutes not be tampered with in order to preserve the access and improvements that have been made.

It is the case that full equity has not yet been achieved. Despite the gains women have made under Title IX, resources for women's sports have never caught up to resources for men's sports. We all are well aware that budgets for women's sports are not at par with those of their male counterparts. Although male and female participation in athletics has steadily grown, female students lag in participation opportunities, receipt of scholarships, and allocation of operating and recruitment budgets. And, contrary to what Title IX's adversaries believe, discrepancies in participation rates are the result of continuing discrimination in access to equal athletic opportunities. As the National Coalition for Women and Girls in Education has made clear in its recent

Diversity Statement has “class”

Carroll Parsons, educational equity and diversity

The following is a report emailed to me and I want to share it with everyone, give kudos to the Calumet Area branch, and say that this is an example of what I would like to send to the national diversity chairperson so that we can say “Indiana is moving on this issue!”

As editor of the Calumet Area branch newsletter, I added the word “class” to the diversity statement last year so all issues of our monthly newsletter contain the complete statement.

Also, as editor I use the newsletter to communicate educational equity and sexual harassment information we receive from the state and Association. The current newsletter carries information about Jacqueline Woods and her efforts to make people aware that AAUW is to be inclusive. There is also information about Title IX and the gender and disability issues that Marilyn Russo talks about in her book, Gender, Disability and Title IX. There is also information about the task force created by AAUW Educational Foundation to address the fact that awareness of policies on sexual harassment has not resulted in lower rates of harassment in our schools.

Our branch is represented on the Community Council of the Purdue University Calumet Women’s Studies program. Currently the council is working on a proposed Certificate in Diversity and Management, which will begin in the fall of 2003. The objective states: “Certificate earners will learn how to translate the potential benefits of diversity into the tangible, productive workplace gains.” Our branch also has given money to our member Colette Morrow, director of Women’s Studies at PUC, to help with her expenses for attending the AAUW Educational Foundation International Symposium – International Perspectives: Global Voices for Gender Equity – in Washington in November. (Jan Trusty, editor)

The addition of the word “class” to the end of the diversity statement has been in effect since early in 2001 and still many of the branches (and, last time I looked, neither had the state) have made this change. I do not get copies of newsletters from all branches so cannot be sure who has and who has not done this yet. I’m sure there are still some (many?) of you who object to this change; however, it is a “done deal” so to speak and we need to get on with more immediate issues.

I would really like to get to some of the diversity and/or educational equity programs at branch meetings this year and next. Please let me know that you are planning such programs, when and where they are being held, and I will let you know when I can attend. Then if there are reports from the programs, comments from members, newspaper articles, etc., send them my way also and I will keep the rest of the state and national informed about the progress being made in Indiana.

Unfortunately, this seems to be a topic on which I must seem to be harping but this is my job and so I will continue to harp. Really, we should all want national to know what we are doing and I dislike seeming to always have my reports say that “I’m certain that there are Indiana branches doing diversity and educational equity programs and making progress in their communities; however, I have no specific knowledge of exactly what these consist.”

This is why I am so pleased and excited to have this Calumet Area branch report to share with all of you and with national.

Calumet continue!! The rest of the Indiana branches will be joining you soon.

Fundraising

Indiana branches are finding innovative ways to raise monies to fund their programs and assist other women via the Educational Foundation and local scholarship programs.

Anderson hosted a “boutique shopping” event comprised of members’ craft items and other appropriate donations. Guests were invited to shop the event and get a head start on holiday gift buying. Proceeds were designated for Educational Foundation.

Fort Wayne held a silent auction consisting of baked goods, candies, gift items, decorations, and whatever else struck members’ fancy to donate. This benefited the Legal Advocacy Fund.

Muncie had an auction soliciting donations from the business community in addition to members. Two of their interest groups organized the successful event, which raised $1900 for the Educational Foundation.

The Calumet branch sells Entertainment and Golden books each year.

Several stores host Community Days for which local non-profit organizations can sell tickets, which can be redeemed as discount coupons on one day set aside for this event. Among those offering this are Elder-Beerman and Carson, Pirie, Scott. If neither of these stores is in your community, check to see if another business offers this opportunity.

These are among the fundraising methods mentioned in recent branch newsletters and shared with you in hopes one of them will strike the fancy of another branch and be just the impetus needed to raise those extra monies.

will send its final report to Congress with its recommendations regarding Title IX. Watch for them. Be ready to write your Congresspeople to voice your opinion as well.

Just What Does Title IX Include?

We hear a lot about Title IX these days but how many of us know what is actually included in this Educational Amendment?

No person in the United States shall, on the basis of sex, be excluded from participation in, or be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any educational program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance.

This constitutes Title IX of the Educational Amendments, June 23, 1972. Senators Birch Bayh, D-IN, Ted Stevens, R-AK, Representatives Patsy Mink, D-HI, and Edith Green, R-OR, were the original sponsors of this bill in the Senate and the House of Representatives in 1972.

Who does this law affect? All private, parochial, prep, and public schools that accept Federal dollars. Does Title IX cover all sports programs? Title IX compliance does not include professional or community sports programs.

In addition to a school’s athletic programs, it does include: sexual harassment issues, equal access to educational opportunities, and participation in nontraditional fields. Before 1972 most females were actually prohibited from enrolling in some technical programs, like engineering. In high schools it meant that girls would be included in shop classes and boys and girls could now sign up for home economics.

It used to be that in many schools, women actually had to have higher scores to be admitted to some colleges and universities. It used to be that women professors could not head departments, no matter what qualifications they had, nor could they belong to the faculty club on campus.

Title IX covers employees in educational institutions as it relates to recruiting and hiring, promotion and tenure, compensation and benefits such as health care.

However, sports programs are the place where Title IX has the most visibility. The US Department of Education’s Opportunities in Athletics Commission
Are We Up to a Dollar?

Deb Romay, Fort Wayne branch

As financial consultants, my company hosts women’s events to assist females in the decision-making process concerning their financial future. My 17-year-old daughter is usually the mistress of ceremony for these. She is a voracious reader and future first female President of the United States (or at least that is what she has said since age seven). As such, Adrienne reads my notes and asks questions about these forums.

“What do you mean we only make 73 cents to a gentleman’s dollar? Why did ERA fail? Why do we make less Social Security than men? How come our pension benefits are less at retirement? Why do female attorneys make less than men? Why are so few women CEOs…” and on and on!

I do appreciate her questions because it gives me a format to share with my daughter, and ultimately other women, about our financial and historical past. It is true women make 73 cents to a man’s dollar. To put this in proper perspective, in 1954 women made 13 cents to the dollar and it was not until the 1970s that we made 50 cents compared to a dollar earned by a man.

This, coupled with lower pension and Social Security dollars at retirement, is a direct result of women raising children and entering the workforce later in life. Many women still have little to no experience managing money. I am not talking about the household finances and checkbook, but the 401k allocation decisions, the IRA choices, and estate planning issues, to name a few. Lack of knowledge and longer life expectancies leave too many women at the wrong time of life with little preparation.

There are female CEOs today doing their jobs quietly, effectively, gracefully, and with corporate governance. But when you consider that women were not allowed on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange until World War II, and then only because there were no men left, it is not surprising that we have little practical experience. (After the men returned, women were once again barred from the floor of Wall Street until the late 1960s.)

As for ERA, I prefer to quote Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg: “Every constitution in the world that was written after WWII says... men and women are persons of equal stature, or words to that effect. The U.S. Constitution is now among the minority of constitutions in the world that does not make that clarion statement.” This does not help answer Adrienne’s question, but it does segue a discussion into the Civil Rights movement of the 1960s. When we got tired of the tiny (oh so tiny) steps taken to improve the lives of women everywhere, we ease our personal frustration by repeating part of the old Negro spiritual: “How long...not long!”

We are a generation away from self-actualized women – women fully integrated into business and culture, while comfortable with their personal identity. Until such time, I applaud those who understand that small steps are necessary: read about money, join a investment club, be a participant in your household investment decisions not a follower, ask questions, find a financial advisor you trust, share with friends what you are doing financially to encourage others, talk to young women everywhere about the dangers of being uninformed, and remind young women that it soon will be their turn to push us closer to the $1 to $1 earning potential.

Our latest women’s financial lecture began with five personal stories. There were very few dry eyes after hearing the pain and sorrow of divorce, death, financial and emotional abuse, and the challenges of the “early” days of business. In our rush to be “super” women of the new century, many of us fail to tell others our story. We need more voices... voices added to the collective forward movement of women. In a time past, we burned our bras in support of other sisters...as we age, our voice and story is all we really have.

My daughter yelled from across our home not too long ago: “Are we up to a dollar yet, Mom?”

smiled and thought of Elizabeth Cady Stanton. We cannot do it alone and all we can offer are our shoulders as a boost to those who come behind us. For standing on top of one another we reach — with our voices, stories, and experience — for a higher goal.

“No, we are not up to a dollar yet,” I replied. With strength and fortitude from those on whose shoulders I stand, I added: “How long?” The voice of my teenage daughter echoes a reply: “Not long, Mom, not long!”

report, it is neither logical nor permissible to position a lack of interest in college sport participation on the part of female athletes when less then 200,000 college participation opportunities exist for females and 2.7 million high school girls are participating.

We are very lucky to have a colleague on this Commission. Cary Groth, Athletic Director at Northern Illinois University, is a member of the Commission. As Cary says, “If it weren’t for Title IX, I wouldn’t have this job.” With people like Cary on the Commission, there is hope that Title IX will be strengthened, not weakened.

AAUW has written a report, “Title IX at 30, Report Card on Gender Equity.” You can find it on the AAUW.org website. Periodically, emails are sent from the Association alerting us to the latest issues and updates from the Secretary of Education’s Commission. Watch for continuing announcements about the activities of the Commission. The Commission’s web address is www.ed.gov/units/commisionsboards/athletics.

Celebrate the young women around you who are on boards and commissions, who are running for office, who are speaking in your community, who are your bosses, who are making strides in their professions, who are in non-traditional careers, who are reaching for the stars. Support them, encourage them, applaud them. Do the same for those older women, too.
